FRIDAY EVENING.....JULY 19, 1878

In response to a note from certain citizens requesting him to become a candidate for renomination for Congress, Mr. J. R. Tucker

"But, as any speech by me at this time, and in anticipation of the action of the convention, might be construed as involving a personal advocacy of my own nomination, and might ougender contests with my honorable competitors for the candidacy of the party, which in my judgment should be avoided, I must decline to address the people of the district in any formal the convention is made."

Contrast this with Gen. Hunton's course in this district, and his public exhibition of certificates of character from one of his colleagues on the Potter committee, and from the Wash. ington newspapers said to be under the control of the District Ring!

The resignation of Mr. Dodge, statistician of the Agricultural Bureau, because he could not stand the incompetence and recklessness of all about him, adds another to the many reasons why the enormous appropriations made by Congress toward the support of an institution for supplying Congressmen with cheap means of electioneering-distribution of cabbage seed among certain classes of their constituentsshould be very much curtailed, if not entirely suspended. It has been computed that though on the Hamilton and Dayton Railroad was packages of good seed can be bought at the seed stores for five cents, every package of the worthless seed, sent out by Congressmen to influence the votes of their constituents, costs th tax payers of the country twenty times that sum.

The radical newspapers assert that moonshiners are rebels in disguise. If that be so the country is in great danger, for it is a well known fact that for every gallon of crocked whiskey made in the little stills in a few of the dred gallons of the same sort are manufactured in the northern and western cities. It rebels in the North are to be counted by the number of gallons of crooked whiskey made there, that section can no longer pride itself upon its loyalty, and if the influence of the northern crooked distillers be as great in the destruction of the government as it is in other respects the days of the republic are numbered.

It is now thought that the Potter committee will have a prolonged sitting at Atlantic City. The proceedings of the committee show that Mr. Springer attempted to have the session held at Deer Park, in Maryland, but make no mention of any effort on Gen. Hunton's part to have the session held at Jordan's Springs, in this district, or at any of the numerous Virginia watering places. If Gen. Hunton were such an influential man as his speech here last week was calculated to induce his bearers to suppose he is, an effort of the sort alluded to would, in all probability, have been effective.

An Infamous Crime. WHEELING, W. Va. July 19.—About a week ago a traveling clergyman named Jacob Shiltner stopped at the house of Edward Baldwin, in Webster county, West Virginia, and asked permission to stay all night. As there were but poor accommondations for guests he was allowed to sleep with a daughter of the host, only 6 years old. He left early next morning and it was found that he had horribly outraged the child and had threatened to kill her if she told of his ness fully fifty miles from a house. He was cap-tured, and after an attempt to lynch him was placed in sail to await his trial in September. The proof of his guilt is conclusive. He is from Kentucky and belongs to the Methodist church.

Lord Beaconsfield, on entering the old palace yard, on his way to the House of Lords, about five o'clock yesterday afternoon, was heartily

The public interest in the promised statement by the Earl of Beaconsfield attracted a large and distinguished assembly in the House of Lords, including the Princess of Wales and other members of the royal family. When Lord Beaconsfield entered there was considerable cheering. He locked well and betrayed no especial feeling at his brilliant reception. About five minutes later Lord Salisbury en tered, and then Lord Beaconsfield rose, umid loud cheering. He said that in laying upon the table the protocols of the treaty of Berlin he should be only doing his duty to the House remarks upon the policy supported by the British representatives in the congress. He could show that in the changes which were made in the treaty of San Stefano by the treaty rope had been removed and threatened injury increasing friendship, and had avoided Syria had restored to the Sultan two thirds of his tionary interests of France. Lord Beaconsfield further stated that the opinion above mentioned that Sofia was not a strong strategical position was that of Mehemet Ali Pasha, who, however, considered the Pass of Ichtiman, which the congress secured to the

One of the greatest obstacles to an object in which the congress was unanimous, namely, the re establishment of the Sultan as a real, independent authority, was the anarchial condition of Bosnia and the neighboring countries.

His Lordship, continuing, said the most competent authorities had convinced him that it would have taken 50,000 of Turkey's best troops to secure any approach to order in Bos nia. Even then the attempt would have perhaps been unsuccessful, and such an effort must have secured Turkey's absolute ruin. He disclaimed any desire to attribute the Austrian wish of the majority. It is compand 1 10 as wealthy a man as lived that an attempt at partition would inevitably lead to a long and sanguinary war. The advocates of partition had spoken out. The government had been taken up into a mount to the North Pole. and told, "All these shall be yours, if you will only worship partition."

This remark of the Premier seems to be an allusion to a proposal which Prince Bismarck is generally understood to have made, that England should occupy Egypt. Continuing, he said it was remarkable that after a great war and the prolonged negotiations all the Powers, Russia as strictly and completely as the others. came to the unanimous conclusion that the best chance for the tranquility of the world was to retain the Sultan as a part of the European system. He pointed out that every great war was followed by a redistribution of territory, but that that was not partition.

Austria had, perhaps, lost more provinces han even Turkey. France lost provinces, but she was still a great Power, with a commanding future. England lost some of her most precious possessions through bad government-a loss which every Englishman must deplore at this moment, and which would not have oc curred if the principle which now governs her relations with the colonies had been then observed. He defended the limit not being fixed to Austrian occupation, as that would only have held out hopes to agitators. His Lordship pointed out that England had, according to promise, obtained a hearing for Greece, and had made, prior to the Congress, overtures to the Porte, which were received in a more than encouraging spirit, for such rectification of the frontier as will give Greece a considerable increase of strength and resources and prevent brigandage and the continued dissension, which are festered by the present configuration of the frontier. But the Greeks had evidently quite misapprehended the objects of the Congress. They were coveting Constantinople and talking of accepting large provinces and powerful islands as an instalment of their full claim. Earl Beaconsfield, in summing up the general results of the treaty as regards European Turkey, pointed out that, excluding Bosnia and Bulgaria, it still contained 60,000 square miles and a population of 6,000,000. When the line of the Balkans was fixed Prince Bismarck said, "Turkey in Europe once more
